PREFACE

The Albrights have become well known on account of their tendency to raise large families. Like most of the Albrights, my father, James R., was a great hand to visit among relatives. He would often take the family down in the country to spend the week-end with first one cousin and then another. There were so many of them that it was quite confusing. I was continually asking about who they were. At times, when father did not know, off hand, he would put me off by saying that somehow they were akin. Still that did not satisfy my curiosity about who was who.

Later, I determined to do something about it. In 1932, along with the suggestion of other close relatives, my father sent out invitations to an Albright reunion which was held August 7, near Holt, Missouri. There were about 125 present. This was the beginning of the first written record of the Missouri Albrights and the creating of an association which has met annually, for the last nine years, the first Sunday in August at the Henry Hessel farm near Holt, Missouri. At these gatherings, I wrote down all the history that the older relatives knew. During the year I followed up this information.

The main trunk of the tree upon which the family branches grew had already been well established by two earlier books. The first one entitled History of Alamance by Sallie Stockard^a dealt with early pioneer families of that section of North Carolina known as the Alamance. Later A. G. Albright of Hoxie, Arkansas, published a book on Some Data on the Albright Family. This history was based on Miss Stockard's early records and tells principally about the Albrights of Tennessee and Arkansas.

Using these books as a guide along with my information obtained from corresponding with many Albrights from all over the country, the records began to increase. Contacts were made with some of my Albright cousins in North Carolina. This led to my trip back to the country where my ancestors had lived. By seeing the places where the earlier Albrights had "left their tracks," I was better able to get a clearer picture of the early family background. Also, by some good fortune, I succeeded in piecing together some missing links in the family chain.

Without the help of many people who were interested in the family history, the different family lines could never have been completed down to the present generation. In the various family chapters I have acknowledged those to whom I am indebted for the information they have contributed.

Although these records have been checked by authoritative persons, nevertheless, errors will unavoidably creep into a record of this kind. It is the purpose of this book to preserve the Albright records for the future generations. My hope is that the genealogy as a whole may prove of real value to the Albright family.

CHAPTER I.

HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

In America today, there is probably more variety of family names than in any other country in the world. Those of us who possess an old family name whose history can be traced back to a colonial immigrant who has a still further record in Europe, should indeed be very proud of their heritage. This is true of the Albrights, who, unlike the ordinary family who knows so little about its ancestors, can say definitely that their great-grandfather did not apparently drop from heaven.

The name, Albright, is the English spelling of the German word, Albrecht. The oldest form of this name is Albert. The ancestral home of the Albrights was in a state of the German Empire called the Kingdom of Bavaria. It was in the region of the fertile valleys of the Rhine, Elbe and Danube Rivers. Munich, the principal city, with its university was quite a place of learning and culture. Our ancestors were a people of enterprise and held offices in the State and Church as well as the army. The Albrights were also among the nobility. History tells that they made up the House of Hapsburg and Lorraine which existed until the end of the Thirty Years' War. The war which began in 1618 was caused by attempts of the Protestants to break away from the Catholics. At the end of the war in 1648, because of the many Catholic victories, the Albrights, who were Protestants, found their existence intolerable. Then too, thirty years of war had devastated their lands so badly that along with other German Protestants, they began to leave their homes to find a place where they could enjoy religious freedom. Most of them, eventually, came to America.

According to the story that has been handed down, almost all of the Albrights in this country trace their ancestry to three Albright brothers who came to America in the colonial times. The oldest of the three brothers settled in the eastern part of Pennsylvania. This brother, to my best knowledge, was Johannes Albright (Albrecht) who with his wife Anna, entered the port of Philadelphia October 19, 1732, on the Ship Johnson of Holland-Amerika Linie from Rotterdam. Their son, born near Pottstown, Pennsylvania, May 1, 1759, was the Reverend Jacob Albright^a who founded the Evangelical Church in 1800. Albright College in Reading, Pennsylvania, bears that name in his honor. Because of predominance of female children in the line, there are only four male members of the family in the sixth generation bearing the name Albright.

One of the brothers settled in the western part of Pennsylvania. His descendants migrated to Ohio, Indiana, and other western states. The name of this brother is not definitely known. A. G. Albright^b says that the Hon. George Albright, a member of Congress and twice a delegate to the General Conference, was a descendant of this brother.

The third brother, Hendrich Albright (Albrecht), settled in America around 1725 near the present city of Albany, New York. Hendrich's sons lived in New York and Pennsylvania. Three of his grandsons settled in North Carolina and practically all of the Alamance Albrights and those who migrated to the other southern states trace their relation to this Hendrich.

^a For further information, see "History of the Evangelical Church," written by Rev. Raymond Wolf Albright, from whom I have obtained the above information.

^b "Some Data on the Albright Family," page 53.

This extensive study deals mainly with the descendants of the Albrights who settled along the Great Alamance and Stinking Quarter Creeks in the part of North Carolina known as the Alamance. In early North Carolina history this was part of a large section called Orange County. In 1848 this section was divided into many smaller counties. Those of particular interest are Alamance, Chatham, Guilford, and Randolph.

In Alamance County, five miles south of Graham, is Mount Harmon (Hermon) Church. George Albright, son of Daniel and Catherine Loy Albright, gave this tract for a burying ground and many of the old Albrights were laid to rest there. Just two miles west of Mt. Harmon is the old Stoner Church where Jacob Albright, grandson of Hendrich, was buried. The exact place is not known because most of the graves were only marked by a small common rock protruding from the ground. There is no record of a name cut in the stone. What information that is available has been obtained mostly from family records usually found in the big old Bibles. However, some of the graves have soap stone markers but age has darkened these stones so much that the records are difficult to copy. Near Alamance is the old St. Paul Church grave yard where many Albright records are found.

Just south of Alamance County is Chatham where the Pleasant Hill Christian Church is located. Here is a resting place for many of our ancestors. Near by, at the old Cane Creek Quaker Church, founded in 1751, there are many Albright names in the cemetery.

Then in Guilford County, at Greensboro, is the Buffalo Presbyterian Church which was organized in 1756 by David Caldwell. Here, in the older section of the cemetery, Albright markers predominate.

This part of North Carolina, first explored by John Lawson, in 1700, was a very fertile land with an abundance of water, woodland, and grass. To these German immigrants, the Albrights, Isleys, Sharps, Holts, Clapps, and Fousts, the Alamance was like a promised land for those who were in search of political and religious liberty. It is said that the purest race on earth lives in North Carolina. These immigrants, who came from England, Germany, Holland, and France, were people of enterprise motivated by love of liberty and religious freedom. Since these early settlers, there has not been much immigration to North Carolina. However, some of their descendants have left to settle in other southern states.

As these early German Protestants spoke very little English, they had scarcely anything to do with the affairs of the State. The North Carolina Germans were very religious. They belonged either to the German Reform Church, followers of Calvin, or to the Lutheran Church, followers of Luther. In every German settlement, a school house was soon built which served as a place of worship.

The earlier settlers in North Carolina seemed very content with their good fortunes until in 1744 when several difficulties arose from the corrupt government practices, unfair judges, and worthless governors. The pioneers were made to pay unjust taxes, and their lands, which were leased to them by a certain proprietor named Granville, were said to have had worthless titles. All of this made trouble between the settlers and King George's representatives, Governor Tryon and Colonel Edmund Fanning. The extensive power entrusted to officers by the king was exercised to lessen the spirit of freedom of these immigrants. As the situation grew worse, it led to the organization of the famous Regulators by Herman Husbands. The purpose of the Regulators was to help each other out when they got into trouble over their refusal to pay the unlawful demands of the governors for increased taxation.

These Regulators openly opposed the English representative, Governor Tryon, in the Battle of Alamance on May 16, 1771. The Albrights, who were opposed to this increased taxation by the English, fought with the Regulators or patriots. The battle was fought on the plantation of Michael Holt, six miles from Burlington. This was the first battle of the Revolutionary War for American Independence. School history books record the battle of Lexington, Massachusetts, fought four years later, as the beginning of the war. This error is due to the fact that the early American history writers were northern people and did not know the facts of the battle of Alamance. Later on, six miles from Greensboro, a decisive battle of the Revolutionary War was fought between Greene and Cornwallis, called the battle of Guilford Court House.

After the battle of Alamance, life for these German immigrants again became burdened with hardships. Some were more or less forced to take an oath of loyalty to King George. Those who did either remained neutral, or did no actual fighting, but helped others. Still others broke their oaths. Many of them became discouraged because the Regulators had not succeeded in accomplishing their hopes of freedom from increased taxation and from corrupt practices of the government office holders. Some of them, instead of being further oppressed, preferred to move to the unsettled western land. As a result, some 15,000 of these immigrants moved to Tennessee. Later, many of these settlers continued westward to Missouri and Arkansas. Today, there are Albrights in every part of the country.

CHAPTER II.

HENDRICH ALBRIGHT

First Generation

This genealogy traces its ancestry to the progenitor, Hendrich Albright (Albrecht). Not much is known of this ancestor and what information is available does not exactly agree. There are two main sources of information, that of Stockard's History of Alamance, and that of Parker's Landmarks of Albany County^a. Both sources state that Hendrich was born in 1716 and, Parker believes, in or near Austria in the Rhineland. Hendrich probably left the old country for America around 1725. He settled on a tract of four hundred acres near the present city of Albany, New York. The land was later divided among his children into smaller farms. According to Parker, Hendrich built a large stone house on the homestead in 1783 which stood for over one hundred years. It was finally destroyed by fire in 1894.

There is disagreement about Hendrich Albright's family. His wife whom he married in 1742 was a Folsom. Stockard says her given name is Anna while Parker says Elizabeth. Both names may be correct. Hendrich, quotes Parker, was the father of seven children, among them four sons. Stockard does not mention the three daughters but then, their married names might have been difficult to trace. No doubt these daughters married, for Parker speaks of a son-in-law named Strauss.

^a Parker, Amasa J., "Landmarks of Albany County," 1897 Part III., Family Sketches, page 69.

Parker tells, particularly, about Hendrich's son, Jacob, (1726-1829) who succeeded his father after his death in 1783 and spent his entire life at the homestead. This Jacob married twice, first to Hannah Arnold by whom he had three children. His son, Isaac, who was born in the old stone house, June 11, 1797, married Secily (or Cecily) Simmons in 1820, daughter of Peter Simmons of Clarksville, New York, by whom he was the father of seven children.

From here, Hendrich's history is continued with the Stockard record because of its detailed information. Miss Stockard lists five sons of Hendrich and Anna Folsom Albright: John, Jacob, Frederick, Phillip, and Henry. Nothing definite is known about the children of Frederick, Phillip, and Henry. These brothers later moved from New York and settled in Pennsylvania. Jacob married and had four children: (1) Jacob who settled in Plymouth County, Pennsylvania, married and had six children, (2) John who settled in Canada in 1800, (3) Frank who settled in Canada, and (4) Amos who settled in Ontario, Canada, married and had eight children. Miss Stockard does not tell about Jacob's son, Isaac, so those listed above are probably the children by his second wife.

Hendrich's son, John Albright, settled in Pennsylvania, married and had three sons: (1) Ludwig, (2) Jacob, and (3) Henry. All three of the sons of John settled in Orange County, North Carolina, and are the ancestors of almost all of the North Carolina Albrights. This study deals with the descendants of Ludwig and Jacob Albright. Nothing much is known about their other brother, Henry, except that he married and had a son, Jacob.

First, the descendants of Ludwig Albright, son of John and grandson of Hendrich, are discussed. Ludwig (November 11, 1731-November 16, 1810) married Anna Marie Keller (November 11, 1733-June 10, 1803).

They settled at Guilford Court House, North Carolina, and had eight children:

1. John (October 21, 1725-September 25, 1826).
2. Anna Barbara (June 18, 1754) married Elisa Powell and had four children, George, Elisa, Benjamin, and Phillip.
3. Phillip Albright (February 13, 1756-1825) married Christina Clapp. They moved from North Carolina to Tennessee in 1800 and had ten children.
4. Jacob Albright (November 8, 1758-September, 1839).
5. John Ludwig Albright (February 17, 1761-April, 1816). As to John Ludwig's family, A. G. Albright believes that Jacob Albright (discussed in A. G.'s book, chapter VII., page 22) who married Mary Dixon and settled near Madison Springs, Georgia, and who was the progenitor of W. H. Albright's group in Georgia, was probably the son of John Ludwig. Reverend D. I. Offman of Burlington, North Carolina, who has studied for over fifty years the history of old families who settled in North Carolina, has a detailed record of John Ludwig's family. It does not include these Albrights from Georgia. Part of his information was copied from tombstones in St. Paul's Church Yard near Alamance. According to Offman, John Ludwig married Mary Troxler, April 1, 1784. On February 24, 1787, she was buried with her second child in her arms. Ludwig married Elizabeth Sharp, October 11, 1787, and had ten children. John Ludwig's daughter, Sarah, married Jacob Albright, her second cousin. Jacob was the son of Daniel and Catherine Loy Albright and the grandson of Jacob and Sophia Catherine Welder Albright. Jacob's grandfather, Jacob, and Sarah's grandfather, Ludwig, were brothers.
6. Catherine Albright (August 16, 1763-March, 1839).

7. George Albright (January 30, 1776-August 27, 1835) married (1) Miss Holt and (2) Mollie May. The George Albright family is discussed in chapter III.

8. Daniel Albright (January 30, 1771) married on October 9, 1792, Elizabeth Clapp (January 21, 1774). They had a child, Sarah (1797), who married Dr. William Montgomery on April 28, 1814, and had ten children.

Having listed the names of the eight children of Ludwig and Anna Marie Keller Albright, we return to their third child, Phillip Albright, who married Christina Clapp and had ten children:

(1.) John (May 31, 1782) married Elizabeth Sharp on January 4, 1810, and had fifteen children.

(2.) Catherine (1783), daughter of Phillip and Christina Clapp Albright, married John Thomas and had eleven children.

(3.) Barbara (1785), married Lewis Thomas and had nine children.

(4.) Elizabeth (1788), married Daniel Sharp and had twelve children.

(5.) Mary (1791), married Phillip Nation, had a son, William, who was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Ohio.

(6.) Adam (1795), married Sarah Burke and had twelve children.

(7.) Phillip (1797), married Catherine Strader and had sixteen children including four pairs of twins.

(8.) William (1799), married Elizabeth Snoderly and had thirteen children.

(9.) Jonas (1802), married Margaret Meyers and had two children.

(10.) Simpson (1804), married Mary Snoderly and had twelve children.

A. G. Albright, author of one of the Albright family history books, is a descendant of Phillip and Christina Clapp Albright, through their first son, John, who married Elizabeth Sharp and had fifteen children:

- (1.) Maben (November 9, 1810), married Betsie Heath.
- (2.) Sarah (December 12, 1811) married Joe Oaks.
- (3.) Nicholas (January 10, 1813), married Polly Heath.
- (4.) Simpson (January 1, 1814), married Hulda Snoderly.
- (5.) Teniah (July 8, 1816), married Oliver Wilson.
- (6.) William (March 20, 1818), married Nancy Stoutt.
- (7.) Louisa (January 2, 1820), married John Curnutt.
- (8.) Eli (October 19, 1821), died at age of eleven years.
- (9.) Pollie (July 11, 1823), married Nathan Moser.
- (10.) Lucy (August 17, 1825), married Jack Busby.
- (11.) Parlenia (May 16, 1827), married Riley Curnutt.
- (12.) Orpha (June 28, 1829), married Madison Stoutt.
- (13.) Mastin (August 1, 1832), married Hallena Busby.
- (14.) Albany (November 25, 1835), married Abraham Thomas.
- (15.) Julia Ann (April 19, 1837), married Isaac Thomas.

These children of John and Elizabeth Albright were raised in Campbell County, Tennessee, in the region called Lost Creek Settlement. Then in 1851 all of the family except Nicolas and Sarah left Tennessee in flatboats for Arkansas (Maben and Teniah had gone on ahead). All remained in Arkansas except William and his wife, Nancy Stoutt, who later returned to Lost Creek Settlement.

About 1815, Phillip and Christina Clapp Albright, who settled in Tennessee in 1800, left for Ohio with all of their children except John, who went with his family to Arkansas in 1851. They moved to Ohio because conditions there, according to A. G. Albright, appealed to their religious and political beliefs. Probably, they were impressed by the prohibiting of slavery (Ordinance of 1787) from this "Northwest" territory, as the land in Tennessee was not suitable for the institution of slavery. It is interesting to know that the descendants of Phillip's son, John, who settled in Arkansas, fought against their Ohio cousins in the Civil War over the question of slavery.

Simpson Albright, grandson of Phillip and Christina Clapp Albright, and the fourth child of John and Elizabeth Albright, was the grandfather of A. G. Albright. Simpson's son, Elisa Asa (October 19, 1840), who married Anna Catherine Osborn was his father. A. G. (August Garland) Albright (March 21, 1875) married Annie Dowdy of Florence, Alabama, on January 12, 1908. They lived in Hoxie, Arkansas, and had three children.

Having outlined the line of Hendrich Albright's grandson, Ludwig, we continue with Ludwig's brother, Jacob Albright. Jacob Albright, grandson of Hendrich, son of John, and brother of Ludwig who married Anna Maria Keller, was born 1748 in Berks County, Pennsylvania, and died between 1791 and 1792 in Orange County, North Carolina. Jacob married Sophia Catherine Welder who was born 1749 in Berks County, Pennsylvania, and died in 1791 in Orange County, North Carolina. They had eight children:

(1.) Sophia married Ludwig Clapp and had one son, John.

(2.) Jacob married Sallie Wolf and had eight children.

(3.) John married Lizzie Graves and had three children.

(4.) Joseph married Barbara Basin and had three children.

(5.) Daniel married Catherine Loy and had nine children.

(6.) Henry married Mary Gibbs and had six children.

(7.) George married Catherine Holt and had ten children.

(8.) Catherine married John Sharp and had five children.

Jacob's grandchildren are outlined in chapter IV. Detailed information is given about the George and Catherine Holt Albright family in chapter V. and about the Daniel and Catherine Loy Albright family in chapter VI.

CHAPTER III.

GEORGE ALBRIGHT OF LUDWIG

George Albright (January 30, 1766-August 27, 1835), son of Ludwig and Anna Marie Keller Albright, married (1) Miss Holt and (2) Mollie May. According to the descendants of George Albright who lived in Missouri, George was the father of seventeen children, nine by his first wife, Miss Holt, and eight by his second wife, Mollie May. As it is not certain which children are by the first and second marriage, they are listed all together. CHAPTER IV.

JACOB ALBRIGHT OF JOHN

Third Generation

Jacob Albright, Hendrich's grandson, previously discussed in chapter II., was the first Albright to emigrate to North Carolina from Pennsylvania prior to the Revolutionary War. With him he brought the old German Bible^a by Martin Luther. It contained the old family records telling of his grandfather settling in New York and of his father, John, moving to Pennsylvania. He settled in Orange County, now Alamance, near Mt. Harmon Church.

Jacob was a drummer in the Revolutionary War. The following is a copy of his war record taken from Colonial Records of North Carolina, 1780, by Saunders, taken from M. S. Records in office of Secretary of State, Vol. 10, page 752.

"Roll of officers and private soldiers detached from the First (or) Southern Battalion of the Militia of the County of Orange, to march against the Hostile Indians, under the command of Col. Ambrose Rampsey:

Major, Hugh Tinsman.

Captains: William Williams, William Murray.

Lieutenants: Joseph Thompson, Peter O'Neal.

Ensigns: Edward Gevin, Elias Powel.

^a This Bible has passed thru many hands. While Durant Hatch Albright of George (Chapter V.) was visiting at a friend's house over night near Burlington, N. C., he saw this book, asked for it and it was given to him. In 1941 it was in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Decie Albright Robertson of Washington, D. C.

Sergeants of Captain Murray's Company: John Murray, Robert Powel.

Corporals: George Holt, John Williams.

Drummer: Jacob Albright."

Jacob was an Elder of the Stoner Church and, as already mentioned in Chapter I., was buried there in the church grave yard. He died between July 28, 1791, and May 1, 1792.

Below is a copy of Jacob Albright's will registered at Hillsboro, North Carolina, July 28, 1791:

"In the name of God, Amen: I, Jacob Albright, Senior, of Orange County and Province of North Carolina, Planter, being sick and weak in body, of perfect mind and memory, thanks be given unto God. Calling unto mind the mortality of my body, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament in the manner following. I recommend my soul into the hand of Almighty God that it and my body I recommend to the Earth to be buried in a decent Christian burial at the discretion of my Executors and as touching such worldly estate, wherein it hath pleased to bless me within this life, I give, devise and dispose of the same in the following manner and form: First, I give and bequeath unto Catherine, my dearly beloved wife, during her widowhood or natural life possession of the dwelling house I now live in, also one fourth of my orchard and garden, also one cow and four sheep to be tendered by my son George to be his with their increase at her death, also her maintenance off the plantation whereon I now live, also what money she may necessarily want to be supplied her at the discretion of my Executors out of my estate, also one bed and furniture, one third of the flax and linen cloth now on the place, one iron pot, one kettle, full share of all house furniture. I give to my son George, one hundred seventy-five acres of land on which I live, also all the crop in the barn, or in the field, all the hogs, gears for the horses, one large family Bible, one great coat, one stove, one table, one dresser, all the chairs in the house, also at the death of his mother one iron pot, one kettle and one loom. I give to my sons, John, Jacob, and Joseph, to each the plantation they now possess, also each to have one equal part of all my estate which shall be sold. My three sons, John, Jacob, and Joseph, above named, each to pay fifteen pounds hard money for the use of my daughters. I give to my son, Henry, the plantation whereon he now lives, also one equal part of all my estate that shall be sold. I give and bequeath unto my two daughters, Sophia, and Catherine, to each twenty-five pounds of hard money, also each one equal part of my estate that shall be sold. I further demise that after my death, all my property not otherwise disposed of, shall be sold and equally divided between my eight children, John, Jacob, and Joseph, each to pay fifteen pounds out of their part, above mentioned, which shall be so much of the fifty pounds bequeathed to my two daughters. All the estate or property of which my wife shall be possessed at her death, shall be sold and equally divided amongst my eight children after the payment of all my lawful debts.

"I make and ordain my son, John Albright, and Ludwig Clapp^a my whole and sole Executors of this my last Will and Testament and do hereby utterly disallow and revoke all former Wills, Legacies, and Executors ratifying, confirming this and no other to be my last Will and Testament.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this twenty-eighth day of July, one thousand, seven hundred and ninety-one.

(Seal)

CHAPTER V.

GEORGE ALBRIGHT OF JACOB

Fourth Generation

George Albright (1768-1838), son of Jacob and Sophia Catherine Welder Albright, married Catherine Holt (1770-1829). George gave the tract of land for Mount Harmon (also Hermon) Cemetery, Alamance County, North Carolina. Both George and his wife, Catherine, are buried there. They had ten children:

1. William Albright (October 1, 1791-October 5, 1856) married Louisa Wood.

1. William Albright (October 1, 1791-October 5, 1856) son of George and Catherine Holt Albright, married Louisa Wood (April 27, 1798-September 17, 1860). They had eleven children. William lived in Chatham County, North Carolina, near Pleasant Hill Church on the old road to Fayetteville which was then the principal market of the central part of the state. Besides owning 3,000-4,000 acres of land and numerous slaves, William owned the largest distillery in that part of the state. He was a merchant and one of his old leather bound day-books in which he kept a record of his accounts for the year 1831 is now owned by a grandson, Walter Hatch Albright. William was prominent in state affairs and was Senator from Chatham County from 1836-1848.

William was instrumental in building the first railroad in North Carolina. The first meeting was held at his homestead, August 1, 1828, and the state historical commission, in 1939, erected a marker to commemorate that meeting. The first railroad which was completed in 1836, called the Raleigh and Gaston, extended for about 75 miles. Today it is part of the Seaboard Air Line. The rails were made of "rich" pine and were covered with an iron strip. On the first trip these iron strips would sometimes come loose and curl up ahead of the engine. William Albright with his son, Durant Hatch, then just a boy, had the honor of riding on the first railroad in North Carolina.

William is responsible, perhaps more than any other individual, for the founding of a temperance society in North Carolina, from which the temperance movement of our country traces its beginning. Today it is the oldest society of its kind that has continuous and active service. It is important to remember that in William Albright's time, there was no law against or tax upon the manufacture or sale of whiskey. There was no public opinion to condemn it nor any social stigma attached to the bar-keeper or distiller. Consequently, nearly every farmer who could afford the equipment distilled whiskey. Two and a half gallons of it would sell for more than a bushel of corn. The beginning of the society started in 1832 when a group of workers at a large tannery in Randolph County, who grew disgusted with the inefficiency and irregularity of many of the men who drank to excess, decided to do something about it. John Long, a member of the U. S. House of Representatives, heard of this group and invited them to meet at his house, one night in September, 1833, to discuss the situation. Because of William's friendship with John Long and because of his business interest in whiskey, he attended the meeting. That night a temperance society was formed including thirteen men and seven women. The fifth name on the list was that of William Albright.

From that time, William became the center of the temperance movement. His distillery was dismantled, the bar torn out and the shelves restocked with merchandise instead of whiskey bottles. He is credited with officially organizing the Pleasant Hill Temperance Society which got its name from the Christian Church near his old distillery, just six miles east of Liberty. The society pledge simply stated that the signers promised to refrain from drinking, making, or selling any form of intoxicating liquor.

William is quoted as saying, "One of the hardest things for me was to explain to friends of the early years who came to my home why the expected social glass was not passed as of old. Often times, they did not see the question as I did and did not hesitate to call me fanatical." In spite of the reproach of friends and severe financial conditions, he remained staunch to the end.

On William's tombstone in Pleasant Hill Cemetery, the following inscription is written, "He served the county of Chatham as Senator for sixteen years, the duties of which station, he discharged with Fi-dentity. He was the people's friend, the counsellor of his neighbors, and enjoyed the blessed reputation of being a Peace maker. He was the unflinching friend of the temperance cause and other organizations for the moral improvement of man, and for the advancement of Right and Justice, he exercised the best energies of his useful life. He died beloved of all and his many excellencies will ever remain in the hearts of those who knew him, a perpetual monument to his memory."

The following are the eleven children of William and Louisa Wood Albright:

(1.) Elizabeth Albright (September 22, 1817-June 19, 1887), married Lewis Albright, her cousin. Elizabeth's grandfather, George, and Lewis' father, Daniel, were brothers. They had four children.

(2.) Julia Albright (March 2, 1820-June 22, 1885) married David Carter and had nine children.

(3.) Margaret Albright (March 9, 1822-August 26, 1846) married Calvin Johnson.

(4.) Tamer Albright (May 25, 1824-December 20, 1905), married Larkin Vestal and had two children.

(5.) Durant Hatch Albright (August 12, 1826-November 3, 1913), married Sylvina Siler (January 8, 1836-October 29, 1870), and had seven children. After her death, he married Jane Griffin and had two children by his second wife.

(6.) William Gaston Albright (February 8, 1829-June 2, 1884), married Barbara Ann Trollinger (November 6, 1831-October 22, 1913). They had three children, Dora (1858-1918), Cornelia and Stella.

(7.) Eleanor Albright (February 8, 1832-May 1, 1908), married Thomas Dixon and had three children.

(8.) Mary Albright (July 24, 1834-April 7, 1870), married Dr. Wm. Johnson. Their son, Robert, went to Indiana, married and had a daughter. After Dr. Johnson's death, Mary married James Jones and had two children, Mary and George.

(9.) Emily Albright (November 30, 1836-July 12, 1921) married Wm. Stockard and had four children: Gaston, Stella, Daisy, and Samuel.

(10.) Martha Albright (January 2, 1840-March 28, 1926), married John Wood and had four children: Flora, Mattie, Maggie, and John.

(11.) Henry Clay Albright (July 13, 1842-October 27, 1864), was killed in the Civil War.

Henry Clay Albright, the eleventh child of William and Louisa Wood Albright, had a very interesting war record. At the beginning of the Civil War in 1861, he was among the first volunteers from Chatham County, North Carolina. Mr. Vance, then Governor of that state, took a special interest in Henry Clay's company and soon he became a Captain. During the war, Vance sent Captain Henry to Snow Camp to get recruits. There, he found strong union sentiment and was not successful in getting any one to enlist. He went to his brother's house, Durant Hatch Albright, and wrote this information in a letter to Vance. His brother warned him against the capture of this news by Union forces and sure enough this letter was intercepted in the mail by northern troops and published widely by northern papers. Captain Henry fought in the Battle of Gettysburg and went into Pickett's famous charge. As history tells, he went into battle on July 1, 1863, with over 800 men in his regiment and only 216 came out unhurt. The next day, the regiment was engaged again and only 80 survived. This proves that the 26th North Carolinians from Chatham County showed unusual bravery and heroic courage. Captain Henry was wounded in the head in the Battle of Squirrel Level near Petersburg and died in Winder Hospital 27 days later. His hat still bears the bullet holes and blood.

Henry's uniform and hat along with a sword captured from a Union soldier of rank, which had been handed down to his nephew, Walter Hatch Albright, are in the state museum at Raleigh, North Carolina.

Durant Hatch Albright, the fifth child of William and Louisa Wood Albright, married Sylvina Siler and after her death married Jane Griffin. He studied medicine at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, and graduated in 1851. He was the first doctor to practice in his home locality who had graduated from a medical school. In those days, when a man wanted to practice medicine, he apprenticed himself to a doctor for several years. Then after a year at medical school, he "hung out his shingle." The old surgical instruments that D. H. used in his practice are now kept by his son, Walter H., and are quite antique compared with the modern surgical instruments of today.

D. H. Albright owned twenty-five slaves and was a staunch Democrat. The following is a deed for slaves given by Crabtree Siler to his daughter, Sylvina Albright in 1855:

"Know all men by these presents that I Crabtree Siler of Chatham County and State of North Carolina hath given to D. H. Albright and my daughter Sylvina Albright all the negro slaves in their possession, to wit: Harry thirty years of age Mary twenty-eight years old Jane fourteen years of age Nancy nine years of age Mahala six years of age to have and to hold said slaves and their increase during their lifetime then to be equally divided between her children if any otherwise to return to her brother Samuel F. Siler and his children to have and to hold the same free from any claim by me or other person in by or through me.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and seal, this 18th day of July, 1855.

Signed and sealed in presence of S. Siler.
(Seal) Crabtree Siler."

(There were no punctuation marks in the deed.)

After the Civil War, the Democrats were disfranchised by the carpet baggers and Republicans for rebellion against the government. So at the request of Jonathan Worth and John Gilmore, who was once prominently mentioned for the vice-presidency, Governor Holden of North Carolina applied to President Johnson for pardon for Durant Hatch Albright. The request was granted about two months after Lee's surrender. The following is a copy of the pardon which was, in 1941, in the possession of D. H. Albright's son, Walter H.:

"Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, (to all to whom these presents shall come greeting:)

"Whereas, D. H. Albright of Chatham County, North Carolina, by taking part in the late rebellion against the Government of the United States, has made himself liable to heavy pains and penalties.

"And whereas, the circumstances of his case render him a proper object of Executive clemency.

"Now, therefore, be it known, that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, in consideration of the premises, divers other good and sufficient reasons me thereunto moving, do hereby grant to the said D. H. Albright, a full pardon and amnesty for all offences by him committed, arising from participation, direct or indirect, in the said rebellion, conditioned as follows, viz: this pardon to begin and take effect from the day on which the said D. H. Albright shall take the oath prescribed in the Proclamation of the President, dated May 29, 1865, and to be void and of no effect if the said D. H. Albright shall hereafter, at any time, acquire any property whatever in slaves, or make use of slave labor.

"And upon further condition that the said D. H. Albright shall notify the Secretary of State, in writing, that he has received and accepted the foregoing pardon.

"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and caused the Seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington, this twenty-fourth day of June, A. D., 1865, and of the Independence of the United States the Eighty-ninth.

By the President

Andrew Johnson

W. Hunter, Acting Secretary of State."

As it happened, disfranchisement lasted only one year. However, no one knew at the beginning how long it would last.

In order to avoid any further trouble, D. H. Albright gave the negroes who worked for him after the war a receipt showing that they had received money for their labor. The following is a copy of a receipt, the original of which was kept by his son, Walter H. Albright:

"Rc'd of D. H. Albright my former master ten dollars in full for work done for him since the Surrender of General Johnson's Army last spring.

Nov. 11th, 1865

George Albright

The following are the seven children of Durant Hatch Albright by his first wife, Sylvina Siler:

(1.) Adolphus Albright (December 17, 1854-September 20, 1917).

(2.) William Albright (September 13, 1856), married Alice McComb and had three children: Fawn, Glen, and Deci.

(3.) Frank Albright (January 15, 1859-November 1, 1934), married Sarah Albright. She was the daughter of George Albright who married Miss Eulis and who was killed in the Civil War. Frank and Sarah had six children: True, Ross, Una, Byran, Violet, and Jewel.

(4.) (Sarah) Decie Albright (December 19, 1861) married Thomas Robertson and had four children: Waite, Pearl, Thomas, and Lucy.

(5.) Henry Lee Albright (September 14, 1864), died in infancy.

(6.) Loretta Albright (May 8, 1866), died in infancy.

(7.) Walter Hatch (July 16, 1869), married Nancy Duffy. His mother, Sylvina, died when he was fifteen months old.

Durant Hatch Albright later married Jane Griffin and had two children by his second wife:

(8.) Bertha Albright (February 12, 1879), married Bun Fowler and had two children: Mayo and Adelle.

(9.) Maude Albright (June 9, 1883), married Harvey Isley.

Walter Hatch Albright, seventh child of Durant Hatch and Sylvina Siler Albright, was one of the most interesting Albrights living in North Carolina in 1941. He made family history his hobby and was an authority on the subject. When a boy, he attended Sylvan Academy at Cane Creek Quaker Settlement and graduated from Liberty Academy in 1889. He was the first student to register at Elon College, an Alamance County institution, near Burlington in September, 1890. Entering college as a sophomore, he graduated in 1893. Then W. H. taught several years before entering the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill for graduate work in 1895. The next year he attended the University of Tennessee. In 1898, he received his M. A. degree from Catawpa College, Salisbury, N. C. After such a splendid education, he was well prepared for the teaching profession which he followed for over twenty-five years.

In later years, W. H. was an historian for the state of North Carolina and contributes much information to the state historical commission as well as to daily newspapers. He had one of the largest privately owned collections in existence of very unique documents including wills, bonds, deeds, pardons, and degrees. Mr. Albright donated part of his collection to various museums. Professor Albright was a brilliant and gifted man and I was fortunate to have the opportunity of being a guest in his home on a visit to North Carolina.

Having discussed the descendants of William Albright who was the first child of George and Catherine Holt Albright, we return to William's brother, Alvis, who was George's eighth child.

Alvis Albright, son of George and Catherine Holt Albright, married Polly Stockard. In 1851, they migrated from Chatham County, North Carolina, to Carroll County, Tennessee. Then in 1852, at the outbreak of the Civil War, they moved to Batesville, Independence County, Arkansas. Alvis Albright was a merchant in his younger days. He helped to organize a Presbyterian Church near Barren Fork, Izard County, now called Mt. Pleasant, Arkansas. Alvis and Polly Stockard had ten children:

CHAPTER VI.

DANIEL ALBRIGHT OF JACOB

Fourth Generation

Daniel Albright (born about 1757 and died February 13, 1831), son of Jacob and Sophia Catherine Welder Albright, married Catherine Loy (1772-September 22, 1856). They lived in Alamance County, North Carolina, and had nine children. While Daniel was at Guilford, North Carolina, visiting his son, William, who married Elizabeth Ballenger, he took sick and died there on February 13, 1831. The weather was too bad to take him to his home in Alamance County, so he was buried in the Quaker Graveyard in Guilford. Daniel's wife, Catherine Loy Albright, was buried in St. Paul's Church Cemetery. Listed below are their nine children:

1. Jacob (July 13, 1791-May 5, 1847), married Sarah (Sallie) Albright (born June 28, 1804), his second cousin. Sarah was the daughter of John Ludwig and the granddaughter of Ludwig and Anna Keller Albright. Jacob's grandfather, Jacob, and her grandfather, Ludwig, were brothers. They had eight children.
2. George (August 21, 1793-October 26, 1868), married Martha (Patsy) Albright (January 8, 1802-April 30, 1864), who was the daughter of John Lending Albright. They had eight children.
3. Sophia (October 3, 1796-October 22, 1878), married Daniel Albright. Sophia was buried in St. Paul's Church Cemetery in North Carolina.
4. William (April 25, 1798-August 12, 1873), married on June 12, 1821, Elizabeth Ballenger (February 28, 1805-August 5, 1893), of New Garden, Guilford County, North Carolina. They had twelve children.

5. Daniel (December, 1802-January 22, 1887), married on June 1, 1827, Amelia Holt (May 26, 1809-April 13, 1879). Daniel was born in Orange County and Amelia in Guilford County, North Carolina. They had eight children, and settled in Clay County, Missouri. Both are buried at the Antioch Cemetery, Holt, Missouri.

6. Lewis, married a cousin, Elizabeth Albright (September 22, 1817-June 19, 1887), daughter of William and Louisa Wood Albright. Elizabeth's grandfather, George, and Lewis' father, Daniel, were brothers. They lived in North Carolina and had four children.

7. Elias, married Pollie Woodburn. Both were born near Greensboro, North Carolina. They had eight children and settled in Clay County, Missouri. According to Miss Stockard's early history, Elias' first wife was Tempe Hobbs. Elias must have married twice, but his grandchildren in Missouri do not have this record. Tempe Hobbs probably died in North Carolina, for Polly Woodburn came with Elias to Missouri.

8. Henry (born in North Carolina and died in 1850 out west at the gold rush), married Rebecca Hodgeon (March, 1814-June 19, 1880) of North Carolina. They had twelve children and settled in Clay County, Missouri. As in the case of Elias, Henry's brother, the same is true of Henry. Miss Stockard's early records give Lettie Foust as Henry's first wife. As his grandchildren in Missouri do not have this information, it is probable that Lettie Foust died in North Carolina, for Rebecca Hodgeon came with Henry to Missouri.

9. Joel (July 10, 1813-January 19, 1891), married Catherine Holt (April 25, 1815-October 18, 1890). Both were born in North Carolina. They had thirteen children and settled in northwest Missouri near what is now Skidmore, Missouri.

The following are the grandchildren and descendants of Daniel Albright (1757), son of Jacob and Sophia Catherine Welder Albright, who married Catherine Loy.

(1.) JACOB ALBRIGHT (1791), Daniel's son, married Sarah Albright and had eight children:

They remained in their native country until 1833, when they left in a covered wagon for the wilderness of Indiana. They settled in the woods two miles north of Knightstown, Henry County, Indiana, built a farm and raised a family of twelve children:

1. Eliza (December 22, 1822), married Wash Lewis.

1. Emily.
2. Katherine.
3. Hannah.
4. Newton.
5. Mollie.
6. Jennie.
7. Marjorie.
8. John.

According to Henry's grandchildren, Henry and Rebecca Hodgeon Albright had fourteen children, seven sons and seven daughters. CHAPTER VIII.

DANIEL ALBRIGHT OF DANIEL

Fifth Generation

Daniel Albright (1802-1887), was the son of Daniel and Catherine Loy Albright and the grandson of Jacob and Sophia Catherine Welder Albright. Daniel married Amelia Holt. He migrated from North Carolina to Missouri and settled in Clay County near the present town of Holt. He owned much land in the surrounding counties. The ground for the present Antioch Cemetery, just east of Holt, was given by Daniel as a burying place for the early settlers and here he and his children are buried. The house on the old home place is still standing. The big old iron kettle has been moved to the Watkins farm, where it is used for watering the stock. Down by the barn, you can see where the log cabins used to be which housed about forty negro slaves that Daniel brought with him from North Carolina.

Some of the slaves were said to have been very valuable. It was his custom, whenever a child married, to give a slave as a wedding present. The story is told that a neighbor once asked Daniel why he raised so much sorghum cane one year and he replied that molasses and corn bread was what made the negroes fat. It must have taken much work to provide for so many slaves. Daniel's grandchildren tell how his daughters did not know how to do any work in the kitchen, but that they were kept as busy as could be spinning, weaving, and sewing to provide clothing for all the slaves. It is interesting in this day when one servant might be a help, to realize that too many would be a burden. Daniel lived to be 85 years old and after Amelia, his wife, died in 1879, he lived his remaining eight years among his married children and their families.

Daniel and Amelia Holt Albright had eight children:

1. William Holton (1827-1903), married (1) Mary Jane Luke, and (2) Sarah Jane Wright.
2. Sarah (1830-January 23, 1848), lived only eighteen years.
3. Betty (Mary), married (1) Albert Byrum, and (2) McIntyre.
4. Lewis, married Phiza Belinda Williams.
5. Rebecca (Becky), married (1) Gant, and (2) Tom Smith.
6. Eliza (Lyda) A. (1837-1932), married Joseph P. Ditto.
7. Joel Thomas (1843), married Sarah Jane Cole.
8. Amelia Temperance (Mary or Sis) (1847-1921), married James Williams (Will) Downing.

Having listed the children of Daniel and Amelia Holt Albright, we continue with their grandchildren, beginning with the first child, William H.

(1.) WILLIAM HOLTON ALBRIGHT was born in Orange County, North Carolina, on September 16, 1827. At the age of 13, William moved with his father, Daniel Albright, to Clay County, Missouri, and remained working on his father's farm until of age. When William was 16, he was converted on a Sunday morning following his attendance at a revival meeting the night before. He then joined the Christian Union Church at Antioch near Haynesville, in Clay County, and began his noble Christian career which he continued until his death sixty years later. At 21, William was licensed to preach and did local work in his neighborhood until 1850. Then he made an overland trip to California during the "Gold Rush" with a group of men from Clay County. Among them were his father's brother, his Uncle Henry Albright, and Rev. Robert James (mentioned in the Cole family history). A year later he returned and entered school at William Jewel College, Liberty, Missouri. In 1855, he left college with the highest recommendations of his scholarly attainments and noble Christian character.

The spring of the same year, he married Mary Jane Luke on May 8, and settled down on his farm near Lawson, in Ray County, Missouri. In September, 1859, at a conference in St. Joseph, Missouri, William was licensed to preach by the Methodist Church South. He had four children by his first wife who died February 8, 1869. Later, on a trip to Illinois, he met Sarah Jane Wright, whom he married on August 18, 1870, at Waverly, Morgan County, Illinois. By his second wife, he had three sons. William continued to preach in the Methodist Church until 1883, when he joined the Presbyterian Church, with which he was at once licensed to preach. He lived at the old home place from 1855 until June, 1903, when on account of poor health, he sold his farm and moved with his wife to St. Joseph to be with their three sons, all of whom had responsible positions in that city. He was a Royal Arch Degree Mason (Bee Hive Lodge No. 393 of Lawson, Missouri). William died in St. Joseph on December 13, 1903, and was buried in Antioch Cemetery, Holt, Missouri.

Before discussing the children of William Albright by his first wife, Mary Jane Luke, I will tell about Mary Jane's mother's family, the Watkinses, who were an early pioneer family worthy of mention. Mary Jane Luke's mother was Martha Watkins, a sister of Waltus L. Watkins (1806-1884). Their father, Benjamin Watkins, of French Huguenot descent, moved to Kentucky from Virginia and raised a family of thirteen children, three sons and ten daughters. The family came to Missouri in 1832 to Liberty. Waltus Watkins, in 1839, bought from the United States government, 480 acres of virgin land in northeast Clay County. As a result of his earlier experiences as a machinist in cotton and woolen mills in the east, he undertook the construction of a woolen mill three stories high which was built in 1861 by slave labor at the cost of $30,000. It was the first mill of its kind west of the Mississippi River. The bricks were made by hand and the oak lumber, which was cut by the first circular saw in Clay County, came from the Watkins' forest. The woolen machinery which was bought from Furbush and Gage, Philadelphia, was shipped by boat to Missouri City and then hauled to the mill by ox teams. The mill was powered by a steamboat boiler salvaged from a sunken steamboat at Missouri City. The machines were operated by skilled weavers who came from New England. They received an average wage of three dollars a day. The negro slaves, not being allowed at the mill, worked on the farm, in the woods and at the house.

At first, the cloth was sold only to those who brought the wool to the mill. Later, operations increased to such an extent that woolen cloth was sent to the greater portion of the state. In 1884, soon after the death of Waltus Watkins, his son John, who was then sole owner of the mill (having bought out his brother Joseph's interest), ordered that the mill be closed and the doors locked. To this day, some fifty years later, the machinery is untouched and just as it was when it was shut down. There are still pieces of wool left on the machines and rotten threads hang from the looms. Present day wool manufacturers believe there is no other such mill in existence today with its early equipment still intact. Within the last several years, much public interest has developed in the mill. Historical societies desire to make the old mill into a museum. Still further, they wish to convert the old Watkins' farm into a state park, since the 1,600 acres of land could be readily adapted to wild life conservation. However, the Watkins heirs have not yet given up this old pioneer homestead and today the old woolen mill with its natural setting reminds one of a different age. Today, in many northwest Missouri homes, old wool blankets made at the Watkins mill are prized as heirlooms.

Having told the history of the Watkinses, we return to the William Albright family. William and Mary Jane Luke Albright had four children:

1. Sue J. Albright, born July 17, 1856, married Thomas Holt (1852-April 8, 1937), and lived in Holt, Missouri (see Chapter XIII, for Holt family history). They had four children.

2. William E. Albright (September 2, 1858), was reared on his father's farm near Lawson, Missouri, and completed his education at William Jewel College at Liberty, Missouri. In 1882, he went to Montana and settled in the lower Flint Creek Valley, where he followed ranching for nearly twenty years. During that time he was interested in a financial way in mining ventures. William married Sallie Walker on November 25, 1885, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. David Walker, an old time resident of Anaconda and Philipsburg. His wife was a school teacher at Stone Station. They had two children. William was the first county assessor of Granite County. He served two terms in that capacity and then retired from politics. In 1908, he was reelected to the position which he held for thirty years. In 1900, William sold out his ranch interests and moved to Philipsburg where he was a staunch Democrat and active in civic affairs and politics. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1936. Mrs. Albright died January 29, 1937. Later, when William took sick, his married daughter came from Missouri to Montana to be with him. While there, she took sick and died of pneumonia on March 9, 1938. Her father died five days later.

Having completed the records of the descendants of William Albright and his first wife, Mary Jane Luke, we continue the history of William Albright who later married Sarah Jane Wright. By this marriage, there were three children:

1. John Chilton Albright (January 2, 1873), went to school at Lawson College and graduated at the old State College at Warrensburg, Missouri. For many years he taught in Clay and Ray County schools where he was known as a teacher of high intelligence and a scholar ably versed in current topics. In 1900, John moved to St. Joseph where he was employed in the general offices of the Burlington Route. Later, he was associated with the St. Joseph Gas Company. On October 1, 1906, he married Bertha Wellwood, one of a family of ten children of James Wellwood and Jane McVoy of Cobourg, Ontario, Canada. John and Bertha Wellwood Albright had two children. John died in St. Joseph on June 20, 1936, and was buried at Antioch Cemetery, Holt, Missouri.

2. Thomas Daniel Albright (July 14, 1874), was educated at Lawson College and moved to St. Joseph with his family in 1900. There he became associated with the Blue Valley Creamery and then the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. He later worked for the Pearl Laundry. On September 15, 1906, he married Maude Courtney and had two children. He became a Steward in the Francis Street Methodist Church where he was a devout member until his death on October 25, 1937.

3. James Robert Albright (August 22, 1881), was educated at Lawson College and in 1900 moved from the old home place to St. Joseph where he became associated with Wheeler and Motter Mercantile Company for twenty-six years. On October 12, 1910, he married Madeline Melissa Chase and had three children. Later, James became sales manager for the electrical appliance department of the General Drug and Appliance Company. In 1934, as a reward for special sales work in General Electric products (total sales during the year exceeded $18,000) he became a member of the Toppers Club, a national organization for General Electric salesmen. This entitled him to a free trip to a conference held in January, 1935, at Miami, Florida. Afterwards, he took charge of the electrical appliance department at Scanlan Hardware Company. James joined the First Presbyterian Church when he first came to St. Joseph and was a deacon for many years. At one time, he was president of the second district of the Missouri Christian Endeavor Union. In 1940, he was honored by being chosen as a ruling elder in the church. James was the founder of the Missouri Albright Family Association, organized in 1932, and president of this organization for nine years.

Madeline Chase, wife of James, was a graduate of Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts. She was the daughter of Dr. G. W. Chase, founder of the Chase Candy Company. Mr. Chase was born in Whitingham, Vermont. When a young man, he ran a general store business at Shelburne Falls, Massachusetts. Then he studied medicine in New York City and later settled in St. Joseph, where he practiced for some time. Again he took up the grocery and produce business. Those were the days when pails of bulk candy at the general store were the community's principal source of candy supply. It was his son, Ernest E. Chase, then a youth of fifteen, who persuaded his father to allow two expert candy makers from the east to come and make candy on the second floor of the old Chase building. Ernest was immediately successful as a candy salesman and sold more candy than the two experts could make. The business continued to grow until 1923-24 when a modern candy factory was built. It is four stories high, a block long and a half block wide. Today, the firm serves the entire middle west from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Before discussing the children of Joel and Sallie Cole Albright, I will tell about Sallie Cole's family. Sallie was one of a family of nine children of Jesse Richard Cole and Louisa Maret. Louisa's parents were Alva Maret (1805), and Permelia Hubbard. Her Maret grandparents were born in France and settled in Edgecombe County, North Carolina, in the 1790's. They later moved to Garrard County, Kentucky. Sallie Cole's father, Jesse Richard Cole, was the son of James Cole and Sarah Lindsay, who was the daughter of Alice Cole and Anthony Lindsay Jr. Jesse Cole had an only sister,^a Zerelda Cole (born about 1825), who married on December 25, 1841, Rev. Robert James. Robert James was the son of John James and Mary Poor and the grandson of John Mims and Elizabeth Woodson. John James probably came from eastern Central Virginia. Robert James was a college graduate and a minister of the gospel. Zeralda Cole and Robert James had four children:

1. Franklin James (January 10, 1843), married Anna Ralston and had a son, Robert James.
2. Jesse Woodson James (September 5, 1847-April 3, 1882), married Zerelda Mims (his cousin) and had two children, Jesse and Mary James.

^a There were several half brothers and sisters and step brothers and sisters.

3. Susan James married Allen Palmer and had four children, Flora, Zelma, Tot, and Fieta.

4. Robert James (lived five days).

In 1850, Rev. James went with a group of men from Clay County, to the California Gold Rush. Among them were Daniel Albright's son, William Holton, and his brother, Henry Albright. Mr. James was killed in August, 1850. Zeralda Cole James later married Dr. Reuben Samuels and had four children by her second husband:

1. Sarah L. Samuel (December 26, 1858), married William Nicholson.

2. John T. Samuel (March 25, 1861), married Norma Maret.

3. Fannie Quantrell Samuel (October 18, 1863).

Zeralda's only brother, Jesse R. Cole, who married Louisa Maret, had nine children:

Sallie Cole, who was the oldest child, was born at the home of her maternal grandparents, the MARETS,

CHAPTER XII.

Albrights Not Associated With Hendrich

There are many Albrights in this country who are not definitely associated with the Hendrich Albright line. This chapter deals with a few of these families whom the author either knew personally or became acquainted with through correspondence.

It is believed that the earliest record of the name of Albright in Pennsylvania was that of Andrew Albright (Albrecht). Andrew was born in 1718 at Zella near Sabl in Thuringia, Germany, and was a professional gunmaker in Halberstadt, Prussia. He was active in the Prussian Army for 18 years during the Austrian Succession, part of which time he was an armorer to a regiment which served in Silesia and Bohemia. Andrew Albright came to America in 1750 with a band of young Moravians and settled in Christian's Springs, Northampton County, Pennsylvania. There he took up his trade and became outstanding in his profession for the perfection and workmanship of his guns. During the Revolutionary War, Andrew enlisted in the American Army, served three months as a private, was then detailed as a regimental gunsmith where he served as such during the remainder of the war. According to one of Andrew's descendants (J. G. Albright of Athol, Kansas), Andrew probably was with General Lee's troops since he was in North Carolina at one time. Andrew's brother, John, who came to America in 1751, was in North Carolina, yet they never saw each other after they came to America. After the war, Andrew settled in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, where he married Elizabeth Orthe, an aunt of General Orthe and had five children:

1. John Henry Albright (1772-1845), married (1) Barbara Hubley, and (2) Catherine Beck, continued his father's trade as a gunsmith, established his business in Chambersburg and Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, then later at Nazereth, and had nine children.

2. Andrew Albright Jr., married (1) Catherine Rahm and (2) Mrs. Youngman, moved from Lewisburg to Sunbury, Pennsylvania, where he was elected Sheriff of Northumberland County, then became associate judge and member of State Assembly, and later became State Senator, but died before taking office.

3. Jacob Albright married Charlotte Leinbach in Lititz, Pennsylvania, moved in 1807 to Sunbury, Pennsylvania, and later lived in Fulton, Ohio, where he died in 1853. They had five children.

4. Godfrey Albright.

5. Susan Elizabeth Albright married John Philip Bachman.

Having listed the five children of Andrew and Elizabeth Orthe Albright, we continue with their grandchildren and descendants.

(1.) JOHN HENRY ALBRIGHT, son of Andrew and Elizabeth Orthe Albright, married Barbara Hubley. They had eight children:

1. Maria Elizabeth Albright married Rev. John Peter Kluge, a Moravian missionary to the West Indies.

2. Susan Albright married John Deemar.

3. Maria Barbara Albright married William Henry, who was grandson of Judge William Henry of Revolutionary fame.

4. Bernard Hubley Albright.

5. James Andrew Albright.

6. Thomas John Albright married Elizabeth Brodhead.

7. Joseph Jacob Albright married Elizabeth Sellers, lived in Scranton, Pennsylvania, where he was president of a national bank.

8. Aquila Ernest Albright lived in Levonia, New York.

John Henry Albright, son of Andrew and Elizabeth Orthe Albright, later married Catherine Louisa Beck and had four children:

1. Oliver Benjamin Albright.
2. Augustus Alexander Albright.
3. Jacob Theodore Albright migrated to the west.
4. Caroline Amelia Albright.

(3.) JACOB ALBRIGHT, son of Andrew and Elizabeth Orthe Albright, married Charlotte Leinbach, and had five children:

1. Rebecca Albright, born in 1800, married Charles Parks.

2. Charles Albright, born in 1803.
3. Edward Albright, born in 1806.
4. William Albright (July 7, 1809-June 30, 1882), married Catherine Garman, his second wife, on September 26, 1833, in Chapman Township, Union County, Pennsylvania, by Rev. J. P. Shindel of the Lutheran Church. Catherine Garman Albright died April 8, 1869. William Albright had five children by his second wife:

(1.) Jacob Garman Albright, born June 28, 1834, in Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, and died March 3, 1874, married twice, had several children, among them was:

(a.) J. G. Albright (July 7, 1874), married Mabel Calkins, lived in Athol, Kansas, enlisted in the Spanish American War, and was sent to the Philippines. They had two children:

(a1.) Lucille Albright (January 6, 1909), married Dr. Gordon Bennett Sekavec, lived in Cody, Wyoming, and had one child, Jay Gordon (January 12, 1941).

(a2.) Majel Albright (January 12, 1912), married Dr. Glenn Underwood, and lived in Chicago, Illinois, where her husband was a chemist for the U. S. Food and Drug Department.

(2.) Edward Albright (September 10, 1835-October 3, 1863).

(3.) William Orlando Albright (January 6, 1841).

(4.) Cyrus Bachman Albright.

(5.) John William Albright (October 28, 1850), in Bever Township, Union County, Pennsylvania.

5. Catherine Albright (1813).

Another Pennsylvania branch is headed by a certain Jacob Albright who married Clauderena Glotcker and came from Europe to America in 1759. They settled in a locality known as "Little York" regarded, at that time, as belonging to Maryland, but later probably becoming part of Pennsylvania. It is believed that this Jacob Albright went to fight the Indians in 1778 and never came back. Thus the extent of his family is uncertain, there being a record of only one son, Jacob, who was born in the old country.

This son, Jacob (1756-1828), settled in Millheim, Pennsylvania, was a gunsmith by trade, married (1) Sarah Brungard and (2) Miss Homan, and had a family of twelve children. Zachariah Albright (1796-1889), Jacob's son by his first wife, was also a gunsmith. He married Elizabeth Kramer and had four children: (1) Zachariah (1822), (2) Sarah, (3) Albert, and (4) David. In the early forties, Zachariah went west with his family and settled in Green County, Wisconsin.

Zachariah Albright (1822-1886), son of Zachariah and Elizabeth Kramer, married Catherine Kepler and had a family of eight children: John Albert, Henry, Ella, Mary, Samuel, Adam Emory, Zyola, and Edwin. John Albert (1844-1927), enlisted in the Wisconsin Volunteers for the war of the States to see service with Sherman on his "march to the sea". At the time of his enlistment, his father, Zachariah, moved to Iowa (New Hampton). After the war, John married Abbie Bailey, settled in Lamar, Missouri, and had two children: (1) Love Abbie Albright who married Jefferson Stickney and lived in San Diego, California, and (2) Guy Harry Albright, who was a college professor at Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Adam Emory Albright (1862), John Albert's brother, lived in Warrenville, Illinois, and was a very prominent artist. He had three sons: (1) Lisle Albright, a business man in Chicago, and twin sons, (2) Ivan Loraine Albright, an artist, and (3) Malvin Marr Albright, a sculptor.

Penrose Hills Albright (1853-1922), was a descendant of one of the Pennsylvania branches. He was born in Maytown, Pennsylvania, and in the late '70's settled in Kansas where in 1881 he established the P. H. Albright Farm Loan Company in Winfield which still existed in 1941. He had three children, Carol Albright Collinson, Penrose S. Albright, and James Henry Albright. As each of his two sons had three children, including five boys, the Albright name will, no doubt, continue to be carried on. Penrose Hills Albright's father was Peter Jonas Albright, his grandfather, Peter Albright, his great grandfather, Frederick Albright, and his great-great-grandfather, another Frederick Albright. Very little is known about this elder Frederick Albright. It is possible that he might have been Hendrich's son, Frederick, who came from New York and settled in Pennsylvania.

The Rev. Wilbur Finley Albright of Beach, Chesterfield County, Virginia, was a descendant of Johann Albright (Albrecht) who was a Hessian mercenary captured by General Washington on Christmas night, 1776. After having been captured, Johann took a German-American wife and settled in Virginia. One of Johann's children, Christian Albright (lived to be 90 years old) migrated to Cumberland Gap and across into Tennessee settling in Knox County. He married Martha Walker and had three sons and seven daughters. William Kincaid Albright, their first child, was six years old when his parents moved to Preble County, Ohio, where he grew to manhood. William then went to Niles, Michigan where he married, later moving to Illinois and finally to Fayette County, Iowa. He had a family of twelve children. Among them were (1) Philip J. Albright of Miles City, Montana, who was 91 years old in 1938, (2) M. F. Albright of Waynesville, North Carolina, and (3) Rev. Wilbur Finley Albright, a Methodist Episcopal minister. He spent thirteen years at a self supporting mission field in Chile, South America, where all his six children were born. Four of his children were college graduates. A son, William Foxwell Albright, was Dean of Semetic Languages at John Hopkins, Baltimore, Maryland.

The author is indebted to the following for information in this chapter: J. G. Albright, Athol, Kansas; G. H. Albright, Colorado Springs, Colorado; Mrs. Carol Albright Collinson, Winfield, Kansas; and Rev. W. F. Albright, Beach, Virginia.

CHAPTER XIII.

Holt Family and Their Relation to the Albrights

The Holts, like the Albrights, were among the early immigrant settlers in North Carolina. Their patriarch, Michael Holt I., came from Virginia and settled in the Alamance district in 1740. He had four sons: Michael Holt II., William Holt, Nicholas Holt, and Peter Holt.

Michael Holt II., (1723-1799) married (1) Margaret (Peggy) O'Neill, and (2) Jane Lockhart. Michael was a wealthy planter, his land extending from Greensboro almost to Hillsboro, with his homestead about in the center, on the Great Alamance. He was a large slave holder and on his plantation was fought the Battle of Alamance. Among the children of Michael Holt II., were:

1. Michael Holt III. (1778-1842), married Rachael Raney. Miss Raney's father was Rev. Benjamin Raney who fought in the Revolutionary War. His war record is found in volume C, page 122, volume 6, page 49, folio 13, of revolutionary records preserved by North Carolina Commission of Historical Counts of the state library in Raleigh, North Carolina. Michael and Rachel Holt had six children:

- (1.) Nancy Holt married Mr. Carrigan.
- (2.) Jane Holt married John Holt, son of Jeremiah and Catherine Holt.

(3.) Edwin M. Holt married Emily Fariss. They had nine children. One of their children was Thomas M. Holt who was governor of North Carolina from 1893 to 1897. At the time Governor Fowl died in office, Thomas Holt was Lieutenant Governor. In the state of North Carolina, the Lieutenant Governor becomes Governor in case of the death of the latter.

- (4.) William Holt married Miss Gray.
- (5.) Alfred Augustus Holt.
- (6.) Polly Holt, died young.

2. John Holt married Elizabeth Bile and had a son:

(1.) Jeremiah Holt I. (October 4, 1756-March 1, 1817), married Catherine Albright on September 12, 1784. According to the records of Sallie Woodcock, taken from an old German Bible of the Holt family, Catherine Albright was born August 15, 1764, in Germany (never learned to speak English), and died March 14, 1830. Rev. D. I. Offman believed that this Catherine Albright was the daughter of Ludwig and Anna Keller Albright (see chapter II.). A. G. Albright, in his history book, gave August 16, 1763-March, 1839, as Catherine's dates. It is probable that these Catherines are the same person. Jeremiah and Catherine Albright Holt had eleven children:

(a.) William Holt (August 7, 1785-August 5, 1866), married three times. First wife was Elizabeth Betty Rainey (also spelled Raney) on May 16, 1809. They had nine children. He married his second wife, Elizabeth Reaves Holt, on February 12, 1822. They had one child. He married his third wife, Martha Dixon, on September 1, 1825. They had three children.

(b.) Sarah Holt (November 6, 1787), married Mr. Whitaker.

(c.) Mary Holt (February 3, 1790), married James Tarpley. They had two children, William, and Jane Holt, who married Penfore (settled in the state of Oregon).

(d.) Lewis Holt (July 10, 1791), married Elizabeth Reaves. Lewis was killed by lightning and later his wife married Lewis' brother, William Holt (his second wife).

(e.) Rebekah (Polly) Holt (December 14, 1794), married Colonel Daniel Clapp.

(f.) Jeremiah Holt II. (June 15, 1796), married Sallie Foust and had ten children.

(g.) John Holt (September 6, 1799), married Jane Holt who was a daughter of Michael Holt III. He later married Nancy Hanks and they had seven children, and lived in Texas.

(h.) Elizabeth (Betsy) Holt (February 19, 1802), married (1) Mr. Ray, (2) Mr. Turrentine.

(i.) Martha Holt (September 6, 1805-September 6, 1806),

(j.) Amelia Holt (May 25, 1809-April 13, 1879), married on June 1, 1827, Daniel Albright (1802-1887). They had eight children. (See Chapter VIII.).

(k.) Temperance Holt (December 27, 1810-July 10, 1815).

9. Lewis B. Holt (September, 1821), was sent to college by Rachel Rainey Holt to study medicine at Chapel Hill, North Carolina, and died shortly before he finished his education.

Wllliam Holt, son of Jeremiah and Catherine Albright Holt, married a second time on February 12, 1822, Elizabeth Reaves Holt, the widow of his brother, Lewis Holt, who was killed by lightning. Elizabeth died June 19, 1825. They had a daughter:

1. Louisa Reaves Holt (May 10, 1825-September 30, 1892), married David Gentry.

William Holton Albright, a Missouri Albright from North Carolina, and his wife, Sarah Jane Wright, (married August 18, 1870) are representative of the sixth generation of their ancestor, Hendrich Albright.

Their grandson, William Chase Albright, and his wife, Anna Kathleen Bradshaw, (married June 15, 1941) are typical of the eighth generation. May this younger generation continue to carry on the Albright name and may some one of them be inspired to continue the record of the Albright family history.
